Just to let you know I am just recovering from one of the meanest virus I and Microsoft have seen to date.

It's very new and no warning have been out that I have seen, this one comes in while you are working on your computer and pops up in Microsoft Security. It then it tells you that your Microsoft security has identified a worm in your computer, check and Microsoft Security will delete it.

Once it's clicked, then the Think Point is downloaded onto your computer with the Microsoft Label on it. I went to another computer of mine (older) and looked up the company, because I know Microsoft doesn't sell their products this way. This wanted to download the virus protection software for a one year fee of $60.95 for two years service its $72.95 and for a lifetime fee it's 90.95.

So far no one has paid for this, so I don't know if this crap would have had been downloaded a way to delete it from the machine once they were paid.

So I have been off the net for a few days while receiving mails on my older computer. This computer is only about 3yrs old and they are already telling me at my computer Microsoft Techs that I need to acquire a newer computer.
