Gentlemen:

The web site has been updated with the following information.

➤ The Inspiration tab of the web site has been updated with unique color film (Kodachrome) shot in 1945 of the V-J Day parade and celebrations in Hawaii. The 16mm color film is unique, in and of itself, but the presentation is also coupled with Jimmy Durante singing “I’ll Be Seeing You” which makes it a double-treat. The scene of Honolulu are simply spectacular. Any Hawaii-aficionado will certainly wax with fond memories. This story is #1 in the left-hand column.

➤ The second story is just below the first and keeps you in that Hawaiian mood of 1945. These are still photographs of the same period. The film, above, was shot by the father of Richard Sullivan, a naval officer. And Richard pays tribute to his father by having the film and slides processed (modernly) and displayed on the web for all to see. This presentation is accompanied by singer Vera Lynn singing “Some Sunny Day,” a song associated with bombs falling on Great Britain.

➤ The third story is keeping you in the Hawaiian mood but discussing some information on the 2011 tsunami. This web site is informative and has gorgeous information on Hawaii travel. For those of you with a scientific minds, pay particular note to the calculation of tsunami wave height.

➤ The fourth story is a tribute to current soldiers, airmen, sailors, marines and all other service members who protect and guard our freedoms daily. This is a news article about Lance Corporal William Kyle Carpenter. Corporal Carpenter was honored by the South Carolina senate this past week - - and it made the print media. Corporal Carpenter’s story is just one of many that has gone unnoticed by too many that appear to be concerned with the comforts of life and have forgotten the price paid to secure our freedoms. This story is #1 in the right column.

➤ The fifth story is poem written by an unknown author. A tribute to soldiers everywhere. This poem is located in the #3 position in the left-hand column.

Here’s hoping you enjoy reading these gems as much as I enjoy receiving and discovering them.

Respectfully,

Ulysses Miller, Jr.
